

This month I am going to talk about VISTA and XP Service Packs. As most of you running XP will be aware Microsoft released its major service pack 2 in February 2004. Doesn't time fly. Did you know there will be a service pack 3 slated for release sometime next year (2008). Once again this will fix known issues (keep sending those error reports) as well as no doubt add some new ones.

The first major Service pack for Windows Vista is due to be released in Feb 2008. This is expected to fix many known bugs and add some enhancements, details of which are unknown at this time. At least we now have a date and a commitment from Microsoft.

Next month I will start talking about Vista and the differences in versions.

Happy Computing
