

I haven't had any feedback from the article I did last month on the Federal Government's solution to pornography so here are some things to consider. There must be only one person with an Administrator account in control of the computer system. If this is not the case files can be altered and/or deleted. I'm sure you heard about the 16 year old that was able to work around the program and gain access to anything he wanted. This can only be because he had access to the system. There must be the administrator account that is password protected for all administrators. Any other users should be set up with a limited user account. This will solve the problem. It is a good idea to do this anyway, even if your not using the software provided as it will stop rogue programs being downloaded and installed without your permission.
